

(Note: The first minute of this video has no sound, but my introduction and remarks begin shortly thereafter.) Attending a Groundbreaking for the groundbreaking visionaries, Ron and Carolyn Yokubaitis. They dreamed of the potential of Data Foundry and now they are expanding to this Data Ranch with careful planning and the dynamic team working for them. The success achieved here in Central Texas is remarkable. In 1994, Data Foundry—as Texas-dot-net—imagined the Internet's potential to transform the way we work and live as few others did. With bold risk-taking and smart execution, this company has grown from a fledgling start-up to an international high-tech leader. I was happy to take part in the groundbreaking of the premier greenfield data center in Texas. To see my remarks, please click here.
